A Word from our AAVP

Dear Colleagues,

As we wind down the spring semester, please accept my thanks for your outstanding contributions to Tech. We are in a season of awards and commencement that allows our academic community to come together to collectively recognize and celebrate another year in the life of our university. This edition of our newsletter highlights your important work to provide opportunities for our students and to serve our communities. So, take note and enjoy! I wish everyone a good end to the semester and safe summer.

*Sincerely,
Phil*

A young couple in love, Robert and Sarah, get engaged in the park of their hometown. Soon after, World War I throws Robert into the trenches where a gust of wind blows away not just Robert's letter to Sarah, but the couple's future as well. Post-war, Robert struggles to come to terms with the changes in the world and the rapid growth of the city he calls home. He once again finds solace in writing letters to his lost love, and does so every day for decades.
